

Crasy Rich Asians

By Kevin Kwan

First published in YEAR

Genre and Subject

Biography
Families
Social conflict
Interpersonal relationships

Synopsis

When Rachel Chu agrees to spend the summer in Singapore with her boyfriend, Nicholas Young, she envisions a humble family home, long drives to explore the island, and quality time with the man she might one day marry. What she doesn't know is that Nick's family home happens to look like a palace, that she'll ride in more private planes than cars, and that with one of Asia's most eligible bachelors on her arm, Rachel might as well have a target on her back. Initiated into a world of dynastic splendour beyond imagination, Rachel meets Astrid, the It Girl of Singapore society; Eddie, whose family practically lives in the pages of the Hong Kong socialite magazines; and Eleanor, Nick's formidable mother, a woman who has very strong feelings about who her son should--and should not--marry. Uproarious, addictive, and filled with jaw-dropping opulence, Crazy Rich Asians is an insider's look at the Asian JetSet; a perfect depiction of the clash between old money and new money; between Overseas Chinese and Mainland Chinese; and a fabulous novel about what it means to be young, in love, and gloriously, crazily rich.

Author Biography

Kevin Kwan was born in Singapore as the youngest of three boys, into an established Chinese family. While in Singapore, Kwan studied at the Anglo-Chinese School and lived with his paternal grandparents. Kwan's father and mother, an engineer and pianist respectively, moved the family to the United States when Kwan was 11. The family moved to Clear Lake, Texas and Kwan attended Clear Lake High School, graduating when he was 16.

He attended the University of Houston-Clear Lake, where he earned a BA in Media Studies, after which he moved to Manhattan to attend Parsons School of Design in order to pursue a BFA in Photography. In New York, Kwan worked for Andy Warhol's Interview Magazine, Martha Stewart Living, and Tibor Kalman's design firm M &Co.

Kwan became inspired to write Crazy Rich Asians in 2009 while caring for his father, who was dying of cancer. Kwan and his father would reminisce about their life in Singapore while driving to and from medical appointments, and Kwan began writing stories to capture those memories

In 2000, Kwan established his own creative studio, clients of which included Ted.com, Museum of Modern Art, and The New York Times.

Discussion Starters

- Compare how Nick's mother (p. 21–28, p. 56) and Rachel's mother (p. 31–34, p. 68) react to hearing about their trip to Singapore. What do their reactions reveal about each of them as mothers? What qualities, if any, do they share? What is the significance of the "Chinese Way" (p. 68) in the mothers' approach to courtship and marriage? Compare this with Rachel and Sophie's conversation about marriage later in the book (pp. 278–79).
- Does Nick's description—"It's like any big family. I have loudmouthed uncles, eccentric aunts, obnoxious cousins, the whole nine yards" (p. 67)—match the way most of us view our own families? Why doesn't he tell Rachel more about the background and status of his family before their trip?
- What does Rachel's view of Asian men reveal about the complications of growing up Asian in America (p. 90)? How does Kwan use humour to make a serious point here and in other parts of the novel?
- Discuss the role of gossip in the novel. What kinds of rumours do Nick's friends and family spread about Rachel, and why How do misunderstandings and misinformation (intentional or not) propel the plot and help define the characters? Consider, for example, the conversations at the Bible study class Eleanor attends (p. 108–109) and the chatter of the guests at Araminta's bachelorette party (pp. 262–70).
- Do you see the events surround Colin's wedding and the ceremony itself as brazen, even crude displays of wealth or are there aspects of the celebrations that are appealing (pp. 393–416)? How do they compare to society or celebrity weddings you have read about?
- What sort of future do you imagine for Nick and Rachel? Is it possible for Rachel to fit into a world "so different from anything [she's] used to" (p. 431)? Does Nick fully understand the reasons for her doubts and unhappiness? What supports your point of view?
- Why does the author devote different sections of the novel to specific characters? What effect does this have on your impressions of and sympathies for the problems and prejudices that motivate each of them?
- What do the marriages of Eleanor and Philip, Astrid and Michael, and Eddie and Fiona show about what makes a marriage work and what can undermine even the best-intentioned husbands and wives?
- F. Scott Fitzgerald famously said, "The rich are different from you and me." In what ways are the characters in Crazy Rich Asians different from you and the people you know? Do they reflect the values of the particular communities Kwan explores or do they represent the ways of rich people everywhere? How do the divisions between economic and social status manifest themselves in American society?
- The novel makes a clear distinction between old money (the Youngs and their extended family) and new money (Peik Lin's family, for example), as well as between Mainland and Overseas Chinese. What differences do you see between these groups and the way they deal with their wealth? How does this shape their perceptions of themselves and one another?
- Crazy Rich Asians is a story of the extremes of conspicuous wealth and consumption. Which scenes and settings in the novel best capture this excess? What do the many references to wellknown luxury brands and exotic, expensive settings contribute to your sense of the time, place, and worldview of the characters?

Discussion Starters

- Nick's family has enjoyed wealth and privilege over several generations. Discuss the impact of their position on each generation, from the imperious Eleanor to the status-consumed Eddie to Astrid, the It girl of Asian society, to Nick. Despite their very different approaches to life, what rules or traditions influence their behaviour and interactions? What elements from his past does Nick retain, despite his new life in America?
- What role does the legacy of European imperialism play in the older generation's tastes and style? How is the younger generation affected by their travels abroad and exposure to modernday Western society? What insights does Rachel and Nick's conversation with Su Yi give into the melding and clashing of European and Chinese cultures over the course of time (pp. 335–38)?
- In addition to straightforward explanations of Chinese words, what function do the footnotes serve? In what ways do they help the author to fill out the narrative or comment on the context and content of his story? Look, for instance, at the notes on pages 141, 180, 219, and 263.
- Behind its satirical tone and intent, what does the novel suggest about the ethical and emotional implications of the behaviour that the characters indulge in? Does it make you think about some of your own actions or decisions?
- What did you know about the financial boom in contemporary Asia before you read the novel? Were you surprised by manifestations of wealth depicted in the book? Peik Lin's father says, "[T] his so-called 'prosperity' is going to be the downfall of Asia. Each new generation becomes lazier than the next.... Nothing lasts forever, and when this boom ends, these youngsters won't know what hit them" (p. 303). To what extent are his insights accurate, not only in regard to the situation in Asia today but also to economic patterns across history?
- Kevin Kwan has said that his novel follows an age-old literary tradition (Wall Street Journal, July 11, 2013). He points to Jane Austen writing about the "manor-house set," Edith Wharton's tales of America's gilded age at the turn of the century, and F. Scott Fitzgerald's chronicles of New York in the roaring '20s. If you have read these books—or other novels about the manners and mores of the past—discuss the echoes and parallels you find in Crazy Rich Asians.

If you liked this book, you may also like...

- The windfall by Diksha Basu
- Unmariageable by Soniah Kamal

Author biography from Wikipedia Discussion starters from Litlovers Read-a-likes from NoveList

