

A vibrant architectural sketch of a rooftop terrace. The scene is viewed from a slightly elevated position looking down into the terrace. In the foreground, a low, reddish-brown wall runs across the frame, topped with a white surface and several rectangular red cushions. Behind this wall, there are patches of green grass. The terrace itself is a light blue-grey color. Two large, beige, conical umbrellas provide shade for seating areas. People are depicted in simple white outlines, some sitting on benches and others standing. Several potted plants are scattered throughout, including tall green grasses in yellow pots, a large orange pot with colorful flowers, and various green shrubs in blue and brown planters. A string of warm white globe lights hangs in a gentle arc across the upper portion of the terrace. In the background, a building with a light blue facade and two large circular windows with starburst patterns is visible. To the right, a staircase with a metal railing leads up to a higher level of the building. The overall style is a loose, hand-drawn sketch with bold outlines and a limited color palette.
